We encourage you to visit us at <https://martinavengrin.com>.

Concerning Feedback

In addition to the information on the comments form, the IP addresses and browser user agent strings of people who leave comments on the site are saved in a database to help identify spam. Your email address may be hashed and shown as an anonymous string to check if you are using the Gravatar service. You can read about how the Gravatar service handles user data at <https://automattic.com/privacy/>. If your comment is approved, your profile picture will appear next to it.

Uploading Media

If you can help it, don't add photos to the site that have EXIF GPS data embedded in them. All photos, even those with embedded location data, can be downloaded and looked at by anyone who visits the site.

Saved Cookies

If you leave a comment on our site, you have the option of having your name, email, and website saved in cookies. Login cookies expire after two days, while screen preferences cookies remain active for a whole year. Your browser will save an additional cookie whenever you edit or publish an article. Besides the post ID of the article you just edited, this cookie contains no personally identifiable information.

We also collect and keep the personal information users supply in their user profiles if they want to register on our website. User profiles are completely editable and removable at the user's discretion (except they cannot change their username). That data is also accessible by the site's administrators.

The control and rights of your information

The personal information we hold on you, including any data you have submitted to us, can be downloaded in a convenient, machine-readable format if you have an account on our site or have posted comments. You have the right to have us delete any information we have collected from you.

Whom we disclose your data and where it is sent

If you ask for your password to be reset, your IP address will be included in the email that resets your password. In addition to this, comments left by site visitors could be screened for spam using an automated program.
